South Yorkshire Mayor brings Region's Buses under Public Control

South Yorkshire Mayor, Oliver Coppard, has announced that the South Yorkshire's bus network will be brought back under public control.

More than 7,800 people had their say on proposals to take bus services back under public control with nearly nine-out-of-ten people (87 per cent) of those who had their say, either strongly supporting or supporting in part, the introduction of bus franchising.

Under bus franchising, South Yorkshire Mayoral Combined Authority will take control of the bus network including depots, bus fleets, routes, timetables, service standards, tickets and fares. Publicly controlled buses will start to roll out in South Yorkshire from September 2027.
