BUILDING STRONG NETWORKS IN GREAT SPACES

We recently hosted the 0-19 Research Network for their biennial get-together here in the Electric Works conference room. The Network hosted by Sheffield Children's NHS Foundation Trust brings together public health professionals (health visitors and school nurses), educators and researchers from across Yorkshire and Humber 0-19 children's services. Within the Network, practitioners share expertise, knowledge and opportunities, and build essential relationships that help shape the children's health research landscape across the region.

Whilst regular online-events have continued, this recent gathering at Electric Works was the first time the 0-19 Research Network have met in person for nearly 2 years. The venue's close proximity to rail and bus services, ensured accessibility for attendees traveling from neighbouring towns and cities.

Of the event, Research Assistant at Sheffield Children's NHS Trust, Amelia Henfrey, said: "It was brilliant to bring colleagues back together for an in-person event. The location of Electric Works worked really well for people traveling in by train and bus. The layout and range of space was also a big draw for us. Having the conference room for the speaker and table-top content, and then access to the Club lounge made it super easy for colleagues to break out and have those more intimate and focussed conversations. We had a brilliant day at Electric Works!"

IN THE NEWS: RED STAR 3D

Electric Works occupiers, Red Star 3D, announce the release of The Scarecrow's Wedding - to be aired on the BBC on Christmas Day. The film's animation services were delivered by the talented Red Star 3D team here in Sheffield with support by Triggerfish Animation.

We love to celebrate and shout about the incredible people that work from Electric Works, so imagine our delight when an email dropped from Gabi at Red Star 3D, letting us know about their latest smash hit.

After months of hard work, the talented Red Star 3D team (animators extraordinaire!) have announced the release of the Christmas Day spectacular - The Scarecrow's Wedding.

Last year's Christmas Day TV feature (a Magic Light Picture, also animated by Red Star 3D) was an adaptation of the Julia Donaldson story Tiddler. The release was seen by 7.3 million viewers within 28 days and secured the highest Christmas Day audience share for a Magic Light Pictures film since The Gruffalo in 2009. It has now been watched by 11.3 million viewers.
